

Yes, I expect you to read and analyze these books yourself. Hopefully, you will discuss the books with family and friends, but you may not have family and/or friends write the analysis for you. Furthermore, you must NOT use Cliff Notes, Spark Notes, Monarch Notes, PinkMonkey.com, Wikipedia, or any of those "Help, I have a paper due!" sites. It is better for you to struggle with this material yourself. Remember, I am here to help you. Please come discuss the book with me if you simply cannot understand the material. You will be reading and analyzing material at a college level next year. Don't cheat yourself of the opportunity to be properly prepared for AP Language and Composition and, more importantly, for life.

If you cheat on any part of REHUGO and I discover it, you will be given a 0 for the entire project.

When you turn in each section of REHUGO, you must put this sheet on top, with your signature and your parent's/guardian's signature.

I have read the books, seen the movies, attended the concerts and plays, viewed the museums, gathered the news articles for trends and issues, and considered the universal thoughts required by this assignment. While I may have discussed all of the above with friends and family, I have not copied any ideas or analysis from any source. I have been extremely careful to properly document where I have obtained all the material in my project (including any photographs and/or art work used to highlight areas of the project). Each essay which appears in this project is my work. I have not borrowed, stolen, or purchased a REHUGO project or any portion of one from other student. The work contained in this project is my work.
